THE ROLE OF THE LEARNER IN LEARNING

Learning is ultimately the learner’s responsibility. Supervisors, colleagues and workshop facilitators are valuable resources to support the learner, but learning will only succeed if the learner takes ownership and responsibility of their learning plan and the learning process.

Learning requires a willingness to learn. Learning involves developing new behaviours, skills and knowledge. For the learning process to succeed, the individual must be honest about areas of development and have a desire to take onboard feedback and alternative approaches. Learners who exhibit these behaviours – known as a growth mindset – focus their energy into learning instead of maintaining the impression that they know all of the answers. Consequently they achieve more than those who don’t exhibit this mindset. The motivated, self-directed learner sees that every experience is an opportunity to learn, and actively designs their own learning plan and experiences.

As we shift into what is becoming known as the 4th industrial revolution, adaptability and the ability to learn will become key skills that people require, as opposed to specific expertise or stored knowledge which were the advantage during the 3rd industrial revolution. Embracing a mindset of continuous learning will enable learners to adapt better to the rapidly changing world, as well as developing capabilities required for their present role and future roles.

Learning requires an investment and a commitment. The learning programs available to ACU staff have been designed to support learners to develop new skills, grow their knowledge and change behaviours. Active participation in all components of the program, including pre-work and post-work activities, are essential to maximising the learning. Workshops are more effective when learners put in the effort required prior to the workshop, arrive to a workshop on time, and are fully present throughout the workshop – putting aside interferences including electronic devices. This simple etiquette can benefit the entire group of learners.

Learning requires receiving feedback. Many learners may not be aware of their development areas. Feedback from others is critical for the learner to better understand their actual performance within their roles, on an ongoing basis. Feedback is necessary to build insight which in turn helps to improve performance. Learners need to be open to feedback and actively ask for constructive feedback.

Involving other people, particularly the immediate supervisor, in the learning process not only enhances learning outcomes but also provides greater accountability for learning application and behaviour change.

Attendance should be prioritised, and withdrawing from a scheduled learning program should be avoided where possible to minimise cancellation costs.

“Learning involves realistic expectations Programs and learning activities offer a broad range of outcomes and useful skills. There can be an expectation that simply attending a workshop will immediately take care of all of the learner’s areas of development or challenges.

Genuine, lasting development is an ongoing process, more than an outcome. There can also be a tendency for the enthusiastic learner to be overly ambitious in how much learning they can apply.

It is recommended for learners to be realistic with their action plan, think about incremental behaviour change, and restrict their action plan to the 2 or 3 key activities that will achieve the best outcome.

A key role of a supervisor is to support the learning and development of staff.

ACU have designed tools to support learners’ and supervisors’ professional development. With each program a staff member attends, the supervisor will also be provided with pre and post workshop material to facilitate conversations with the learner to maximise the learning opportunity.

Before attending a training program, expectations for learning should be set. What is the learner’s plan to apply the learning in their role? If the learner has a plan ahead of the workshop, they will be focussed to engage with the content that is most useful to their individual learning need.

Studies indicate that 70 percent of information is lost within 24 hours and 90 percent within a week¹. Providing regular opportunities to practice skills on the job promotes retention.

Learning is an ongoing process which takes place not just within a classroom or formal learning event.

Learning shouldn’t be entirely left to formal learning programs. A supervisor is able to observe the learner on the job and provide feedback and opportunities to apply the learning where it will have the most impact. Supervisors are best placed to understand both the organisational and individual needs².

Regular communication between the learner and supervisor is critical to success. Support from the supervisor consists of ongoing encouragement, opportunities to apply and demonstrate new skills, and timely and specific feedback. Greater supervisor involvement in learning promotes lifelong learning and improves the quality of these activities.

What the supervisor does before and after a training workshop has the greatest impact on the learner’s performance – more than what the learner does³. Learners change their behaviour when their supervisor provides reinforcement through feedback and activities before, during and after the training workshop.

Promoting and facilitating the process of learning takes only a little time, but it makes a significant difference. Discussing results and providing feedback is motivating - demonstrates that the supervisor is supporting the efforts of the staff member and cares about their development. It also builds accountability, and helps sustain the energy required for behaviour change.

Is this training for you?

In Australia 25% of workers take time off each year for stress-related reasons.

According to the World Health Organisation, mental health is “a state of well-being in which every individual realises his or her own potential, can cope with the normal stresses of life, can work productively and fruitfully, and is able to make a contribution to her or his community.”

This program is aimed at supervisors or staff wanting to build awareness of mental health, wellbeing, suicide and domestic violence. Participants will be equipped with the skills to respond to others who are struggling in a way that is non-judgemental and respectful.

Key Benefits

- Recognise when a colleague, friend or family member is struggling;
- Respond in an appropriate and compassionate manner;
- Refer to a suitable service for ongoing support.

What will I learn?

Accidental Counsellor
You will learn how to:
- Recognise when another person is in crisis;
- Respond in an appropriate, compassionate and empowering way;
- Refer for ongoing support.

You will NOT be expected to be a counsellor.

Domestic Violence Awareness
You will learn how to:
- Recognise categories of behaviours that constitute domestic violence;
- Respond to another who discloses that they are living with domestic violence;
- Take care of yourself and keep yourself safe during and after a conversation about domestic violence.

CONSTRUCTIVELY CHALLENGING THINKING & DECISIONS

Is this training for you?

We may often find it hard to make decisions under time pressure, and in particular, in situations where people and emotions are involved.

This program is for staff looking for a straightforward and efficient process when making decisions, that incorporates objective information and embraces diversity. This program is also for staff wanting to improve their confidence when evaluating available options and their ability to persuade others to accept their decisions.

Key Benefits

✓ Look beyond the obvious and recognise patterns and trends to draw out key information from complex data and interpret data;
✓ Make timely, evidence-based decisions using structured decision making processes;
✓ Engagement of key stakeholders in relevant decisions;
✓ Express your opinion (decisions) with confidence and conviction;
✓ Improved acceptance of the decisions made by people, project, and content managers.

What will I learn?

You will learn how to:
• Identify preferred thinking style;
• Understand role of assumptions and biases in thought processes;
• Identify traps leading to group thinking and understand techniques to avoid this;
• Develop practical strategies to make well considered and objective decisions;
• Examine common decision scenarios and the impact of your decisions;
• Build your capability to balance intuition and rational analysis when making decisions;
• Explore the importance of engagement in decision making processes;
• Examine how your organisational context may impact decision making.

We have often been in situations looking for relevant ACU information sources to aid the analysis that supports our decisions. We may tend to doubt our knowledge and ability to make sound decisions with a clear business rationale in an ACU context.

This program is for staff looking for strategies to increase the likelihood of making good quality and objective decisions.

What will I learn?
You will learn how to:
• Build awareness of typical decision scenarios in the ACU context;
• Develop practical strategies to test your decisions against the ACU Mission, Vision and Values and identify broader contextual issues and considerations that affect ACU business outcomes;
• Clearly articulate the business rationale to support decisions.

Key Benefits
✓ Effective use of formal and informal decision-making structures;
✓ Appropriate involvement of key stakeholders across ACU in relevant decisions, building collaboration across functions and specialists;
✓ Stronger alignment between key decisions and the ACU Mission, Vision and Values;
✓ Enhance political sensitivity in decision making processes and strengthened confidence in and accountability for decisions across organisational levels.

Systems Thinking is a powerful approach for understanding the nature of why situations are the way they are, and how to go about improving results when working with complexity.

Design Thinking is increasingly being used by some of the world's leading organisations to drive innovation.

This program is for staff who want to apply innovative approaches to their work.

Key Benefits
✓ Transform the way you perceive and resolve issues;
✓ Establish innovation as a core part of the ACU culture and "business as usual" practices;
✓ Upon completion, participants will be able to immediately apply Design Thinking approaches to their own situations, and plan for how to embed this type of thinking to drive innovation.

What will I learn?
You will learn how to:
• Identify the relationship between innovation, Systems Thinking and Design Thinking;
• Apply the steps of Design Thinking methodology;
• Set up a Design Thinking project;
• Understand the value of adopting a Systems Thinking mindset when analysing and improving situations;

You will also learn what other leading organisations are doing in this area through case studies.

This program is designed to introduce staff and supervisors to a practical process to guide their own and their team members' development planning. The outcome is a meaningful personal development plan that supports the ACU’s current and future needs.

What will I learn?
You will learn how to:
• Recognise the role of a leader and team member in development planning and execution;
• Recognise the importance of development to the success of individuals, teams, and ACU;
• Use a three-step process – Assess, Acquire, Apply – to identify strengths and growth areas, plan development actions, and successfully implement development plans;
• Employ a set of best practices to overcome common development barriers and challenges;
• Measure the effectiveness of development efforts so they know they are successful.

Key Benefits
✔ Understand the development planning process to provide meaning to individual development plans;
✔ Recognise the importance of development to the success of individuals, teams, and ACU;
✔ Develop meaningful development plans aligned to the strategic direction of the ACU.

Is this training for you?
This program provides the skills and resources staff and supervisors need to accelerate the process of implementing change with their team members and to create an agile work environment where people are more open to change.

In today’s complex and competitive environment, it’s no surprise that only 30% of workplace change initiatives succeed. For workplace change initiatives to be successful, organisations need staff who are able to turn resistance into commitment and inspire colleagues to take ownership of change.

What will I learn?
You will learn how to:
• Accelerate the process of effecting change at ACU;
• Minimise the potential negative effects change can have on productivity, morale, and collaboration;
• Turn resistance into commitment and inspire team members to take ownership of change;
• Clearly communicate the business rationale and benefits of change for the team and the organisation.

Ongoing change is essential for organisations to remain competitive. Change can be small or significant and can be people or process focussed. Successful supervisors have the capability to lead their teams through change, to improve business outcomes. Understanding different responses to change is important to support people going through the change.

This program is suitable for supervisors wanting to understand how individuals react to change, inspire others to embrace change, lead change at ACU, and how to communicate change initiatives.

Key Benefits
✓ Communicate with clarity to reduce ambiguity;
✓ Clearly present the business case for change and create a sense of urgency;
✓ Proactively consider the impact of change on people and ensure this is addressed in your actions and communications;
✓ Increase retention;
✓ Anticipate and take actions to manage the emotional impact of change.

What will I learn?
You will learn how to:
• Understand your role as a supervisor in guiding and supporting colleagues through change;
• Examine common challenges in leading teams through change and how you can overcome them;
• Reflect on different leadership styles and the associated impact on staff engagement during change processes;
• Construct effective messages to communicate change to your audience;
• Develop practical strategies to build a “change resilient” team;
• Explore the ‘transition curve’ to better understand and recognise common responses during each stage of change;
• Examine your personal reactions to change and understand the potential implications to others.

Working with purpose and values is at the heart of achieving organisational excellence and staff engagement at ACU. In the face of turbulence and change, working with purpose and values becomes the major source of continuity, coherence, renewal and sustainability.

This program is for those staff who are looking for ways to make ACU a university like no other, by enabling and enriching ACU’s Mission and values through their work.

What will I learn?

You will learn how to:
• Transmit ACU values through words, behaviours and actions;
• Harness the power of values based leadership and sharing stories of how ACU is making a difference in the lives of real people, including students, staff and communities;
• Link between working with purpose and positive psychology, high performing teams, culture, learning, and growth mindset;
• Apply the PERMA Model (Positive emotion, Engagement, Relationships, Meaning and Accomplishments) to build a flourishing organisation.

Key Benefits

✓ Influence ACU culture to one where staff are inspired by the meaning of their work and connect what they do to ACU’s Mission in “the pursuit of knowledge, the dignity of the human person and the common good”;
✓ Become influential in shaping a stronger work culture at ACU and bringing changes in the communities we work in.
